Internet Safety

You may have heard your children talking about "the Momo Challenge." Social media and news outlets are buzzing about this topic, and students are talking about it with their friends. There is little evidence that the Momo Challenge is worth worrying too much over; it seems to be more of an urban legend. This isn't the first, and won't be the last, that we see something of this nature. However, this does bring to light the importance of internet safety. At school, we are educating students about internet safety and the importance of informing an adult when they encounter something on their device that concerns them. At home, you can talk with your children about the importance of internet safety, and monitor their devices and their activities.
